THE POLITICAL SYSTEM OF THE USA

The United States Constitution, written in 1787, established the country's political system and is the basis for its laws. In 200 years, the United States has experienced enormous growth and change. Yet the Constitution works as well today as when it was written. One reason is that the Constitution can be amended, or changed. Another reason is that the constitution is different at different times.

The United States has a federalist system. This means that there are individual states, each with its own government, and there is a federal, or national, government. Within the national government, power is divided among three branches: the legislative, executive, and judicial.

The legislative branch consists of Congress which has two parts — the House of Representatives and the Senate. The Congress's main function is to make laws.

The President is the head of the executive branch and the country. The executive branch administers the laws, decides how the laws should be carried out.

The judicial branch interprets the laws and makes sure that new laws are in keeping with the Constitution. There are several levels of federal courts. The Supreme Court is the most important.

Each state has its own constitution. Like the national government, state governments are divided into legislative, executive, and judicial branches. There are State senators and representatives and state court system. Just as the President is the leader of the national government, each state has a governor as its leader.

The United States has two main political parties — the Democratic and Republican parties. Many other smaller parties play little if any role.

Voters elect the president as well as senators, representatives, governor, etc. A voter can choose candidates from different parties, so the President does not have to be from the party that has a majority in Congress.

There are no clear differences between the Republican and Democratic parties. In general, the Republicans tend to be more conservative and to have more support among the upper classes, while the Democrats tend to be more liberal and to have more support among the working classes and the poor.

QUESTIONS

1. What does the Constitution of the USA establish?
2. What is the main peculiarity of the US Constitution?

Political System of Canada

Canada is an independent federal parliamentary state.

The Queen of Great Britain, Elizabeth II, is the official head of the state, but the Governor General acts as her representative.

Canada combines the American federal form of government with the British cabinet system.

As a federation, Canada is made up of ten provinces and two territories.

Canadian central government in Ottawa represents all the peoples of Canada.

Each province has its own government and parliament.

Parliament of Canada consists of two houses, the Upper House called the Senate, and the Lower House called the House of Commons.

The Senate has 104 members.

Senators are appointed by the Governor General on the recommendation of the Prime Minister.

The Senate has less power than the House of Commons.

Members of the House of Commons are elected for a term of five years.

The cabinet system of Canada unites the legislative and the executive branches.

The Prime Minister and the Cabinet are usually members of the House of Commons, which is the highest authority in the government.

The Cabinet consists of 20 or more ministers, chosen by the Prime Minister from leaders of the majority party in the House of Commons.

Today most of the Governor General's powers have disappeared and he follows the directions of the Cabinet.

The two leading political parties in Canada are the Progressive Conservative Party and the Liberal Party.

The New Democratic Party is also rather influential.

The Constitution of the country was only adopted in 1982.

Questions:

1. Who is the head of the country?
2. Where is the government situated?
3. How many provinces are there in Canada?
4. What does Parliament of Canada consist of?
5. How many leading political parties are there in Canada nowadays?
